TRANSLATION OPPORTUNITIES

WITH THE

JOINT PUBLICATIONS RESEARCH SERVICE

BRIEF DESCRIPTION

The U.S. Joint Publications Research Service (JPRS) provides translation support to CIA and various government departments and agencies. The work of JPRS stems from the needs of government researchers and analysts for accurate and timely translation of foreign-language materials in the social science, technical and scientific fields.

The foreign literature in some 60 languages sent to JPRS is in many cases highly technical and requires specific subject knowledge as well as a mastery of a foreign language. For those who qualify, JPRS contracts at a rate commensurate with the translator's educational background, experience and level of accomplishment on the language examination. Translators work at home and all aspects of JPRS work can be handled by mail.

LANGUAGE NEEDS

JPRS has a continuing need for experienced translators to work in Russian, Eastern and Western European, Middle Eastern and Oriental languages. Our current need is greatest in the following languages:

Arabic	Korean
Albanian	Polish
Czech	Serbo-Croatian
Hebrew	Russian/transportation, electronics and other industries
